

CASSIOPEIA

Desktop Sit-Stand Retrofit

The CASSIOPEIA Desktop Sit-Stand Retrofit from ErgoVerse retrofits any stationary desk into a sit-stand desk. These freestanding units require no modifications to the existing desk and can be set up in under 10 minutes. The CASSIOPEIA offers keyboard elevations from 1" to 15" above the mounting surface height. With a 14" range, both the 27" and 36" widths are able to meet the requirements of most users. The 27" model features a 26.75" wide worksurface while the Standard model provides an ample 35" width. The 23" surface depth ensures that monitors can be positioned at an appropriate viewing distance and provides space for other desktop items. In short, the CASSIOPEIA gives you all the benefits of a sit-stand desk without sacrificing workspace. The keyboard tray is 12.75" deep to accommodate central pointing devices but width varies with the model—26.75" wide on the Compact model and 34.5" wide on the Standard model—allowing plenty of space on both for even the largest ergonomic keyboards and mice.

The gas cylinder mechanism makes moving the platform up or down effortless. The CASSIOPEIA uses an X-style mechanism which permits the keyboard and work surfaces to move straight up or down without forcing the user away from the desk when moving to a standing position. This means that it also works well in smaller work areas where the cantilever design common on many other sit-stand converters forces users to step away from the desk. The CASSIOPEIA offers 12 keyboard height settings (a seated position 1" above the desk surface - and an additional 11 settings ranging from 6.5" - 15" above the desk for standing applications). The worksurface is consistently positioned 5" above the chosen keyboard height setting. The 22.5" deep footprint means this sit-stand retrofit unit can work comfortably on desks as shallow as 23" deep.
